Welcome:

You have registered for an exciting approach to the study of Criminal Justice. Assigned readings are enhanced by Internet assignments that will take you to many interesting and unique places on the World Wide Web. This online class is designed for disciplined, self-motivated, independent learners. Although we will be moving through the semester as a class, there are times during the semester that you will be studying on your own or in small groups. However, at no time should you feel alone. As your instructors, we will be available throughout the semester to answer questions or to discuss any of the assigned material. We will be as close as your phone or computer and as accessible as a call or an e-mail message. What we especially welcome are those questions that you may feel are too “dumb” to ask. They are often the most insightful.

Diversity:

As your instructor, it is my intent that students from diverse backgrounds and perspectives be well-served by this course and that the diversity which students bring to this class be viewed and used as both a resource and a strength. It is also my intent to assign materials and plan learning activities that are respectful of diversity, be it gender, race, socioeconomic status, culture, linguistic background, religion, gender, sexual orientation, ethnicity, age, physical ability, perspective or any other such characteristic. Any suggestions for improving the value of diversity for you personally or for other students or student groups in this course are encouraged and appreciated.

Student Conduct

Students are expected to handle themselves professionally at all times. Each student is responsible for adhering to the student Code of Conduct as stated in the Student Handbook. Professionalism includes attending and being prepared for class, being engaged, being active participants, and adhering to all rules and regulations. Students can expect to be treated as college-level students, and as such, require standards of professionalism that are highly consistent with the “real world.” Students must direct comments or responses to the class in a professional manner. Due to the controversial social issues covered, if you are offended by the comments of a fellow class member or instructor, please speak to the instructor personally to discuss the issue/problem. In many cases these instances result in valuable learning experiences.

Method of Instruction

The course makes use of lectures, classroom discussion, multimedia presentations, physical training, scenarios, homework assignments, and practical activities. Guest speakers will help to give students a broad idea of the variety of career opportunities that exist in the Criminal Justice field.

Evaluation and Grading

Your grade will be based on a cumulative point total. However, do not count solely on “points” as class participation and attendance will be imperative to maintain a solid grade in this class. Grades will be based on the following criteria. Further explanation of the assigned points or assignments will follow throughout the year.

Additionally, responsible students should do the following things.

- Read the course syllabus
- Demonstrate and respect divergent opinions
- Complete all assignments no later than the deadline. The deadline is the last possible time to submit it. Earlier is better.
- Get INVOLVED in class discussions and ask questions if you are unsure
- Notify the instructor EARLY in the course if you are having problems
- Read material before the due dates
- Manage your time so assignments are done EARLY
- Create index study cards, work with other students to have a study group

ALL written work must be typed.

NETIQUETTE: In any social interaction, certain rules of etiquette are expected and contribute to more enjoyable and productive communication. The following tips for interacting online in e-mail and/or Discussion Board messages are adapted from guidelines originally compiled by Chuq Von Rospach and Gene Spafford.

*Remember that the person receiving your message is someone like you, someone who deserves and appreciates courtesy and respect.

*Be brief; succinct, thoughtful messages have the greatest impact.

*Your messages reflect on YOU; take time to make sure that you are proud of their form and content.

*Use descriptive subject headings in e-mail messages.

*Think about your audience and the relevance of your messages.

*Be careful with humor and sarcasm; without the voice inflections and body language of face-to-face communication, Internet messages can be easily misinterpreted.

*When making follow-up comments, summarize the parts of the message to which you are responding.

*Avoid repeating what has already been said; needless repetition is ineffective communication.
